AWFUL CRIME SHOCKS COUNTY

Negro Kills Paramour in Fit of Jealous Rage Early Saturday
—Is Later Arrested.

About five o'clock Saturday morning Sam Jackson, colored, shot and instantly killed Mary Ella Williams, colored, at her home in this city. It appears Jackson had been threatening the Williams girl for some days prior to the killing and Saturday morning quietly entered her home through a rear door to which he carried a key and shot her twice in the breast while she slept. It is said either of the shots would have been fatal. Immediately following the shooting Jackson made his escape.

Acting on what proved to be a reliable piece of information from Bourbon county, Monday night, Sheriff Howell, (accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Montjoy, Robert Young, Henry Thomas and Robert Nelson, the latter driving the car), hurriedly went to Cane Ridge in Bourbon county where Jackson was arrested without resistance and safely delivered him to the jailer here.

A GOOD SELECTION

Hon. Robert H. Winn and Chas. D. Grubbs, a couple of good lawyers and two fine men from Mt. Sterling, came in Monday night to attend to some legal matters before Circuit Court. Mr. Winn was a Judge of the Court of Appeals and made a very fine reputation for the time he served, and, like Petroleum V. Nasby, who was postmaster at the Confederate Cross Roads, hopes to be again. Judge Winn likely has an ambition to get a full term in this same office, getting it next time by a commission from the people rather than by appointment from the Governor. It was a good selection. —Jackson Times.

WILL RETURN HOME

Mr. James C. French has resigned his position with the Winchester Drug Company at Winchester, Ky., and will return to this city to live.

Mrs. Prewitt's School.

Mrs. Prewitt wishes to announce that her school will begin the fall term on September 13th.

SAYS HE IS NOT GUILTY BUT READY TO DIE

In a letter to his wife, Wallace Smothers, who is to be electrocuted within a few days at Eddyville, told her that he had made his peace with God and that he believed that his sins had been forgiven. He said he was prepared to die but that he was not guilty of the crime for which he has to give his life.

He begged his wife to raise their two children right and teach them to go to church. Smothers was convicted of assaulting a little girl in Clark county a short time ago.

PARIS FAIR THIS WEEK

The Bourbon County Fair will be held September 1st, 2nd and 3rd and a cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend. The fair promises to be bigger and better than ever before.

COMING EVENTS, ETC

It was Marse Henry, we believe, who said that figures won't lie but liars will figure. If we were to get into the prognosticating game, like some of our Republican friends who are claiming a great victory for Mr. Morrow and the rest of the Republican ticket, we'd certainly take into consideration the following figures, official vote polled in the recent primary election:

In the Democratic Governor's race, Stanley received 107,585 votes, McChesney, 69,22, McDermott, 25,918, and Bosworth, 3,146, making a total of 206,371.

In the Republican contest, Morrow received 68,645 and McLaughlin 8,837, making a total of 77,482.

There were 128,889 more Democrats, according to the above figures, participating in the primary than Republicans.

We do not predict a majority in November for Mr. Stanley, of over 100,000, but there must be some significance in such a wide difference in the voting strength of the two parties.—Estill Tribune.

CAMARGO HAS BIG SCHOOL

Montgomery county's first consolidated school, located at Camargo, opened Monday with an enrollment of seventy pupils. Temporarily and until the completion of the new handsome building now being erected, the old building will be occupied. A large number of interested persons gathered at the building and much enthusiasm was shown in the new venture. An active Mothers' Club was formed for the purpose of co-operating and aiding the school in every possible way. As our readers know, the consolidation of inferior rural schools into one commodious school centrally located and capably taught, is one of the reforms the Advocate has long fought for and we confidently look for big things from the Camargo Consolidated School.

PROF. BRUCE REYNOLDS

We have been advised by the management of The Paramount Theatre that they have signed a contract with Prof. Bruce Reynolds, the celebrated violinist, of Lexington, for the entire Fall and Winter season. Prof. Reynolds has been playing at The Paramount for several weeks and his exquisite playing has added a great deal to the popularity of this splendid show house. The news that Prof. Reynolds will remain here will be received with a great deal of pleasure by the theatre-going public.

HAS ENJOYED HIS VISIT

Representative of South African Government is Pleased With His Reception.

Mr. Editor:

I have made such a host of excellent friends in "Old Kaintuck" that I am obliged to beg for a space in your widely read paper in order to express to them, one and all, my most heartfelt appreciation and esteem for their bountiful hospitality and friendliness.

For a month, crowded with valuable information and most pleasant memories, I have enjoyed the company of men and women in every walk of life—sheriffs, doctors, professors, merchants and last, but not least—farmers, the toilers of the soil, the herdsmen, the backbone of any country. Nowhere in the world during my three years travel of study have I found men and matters so congenial, progressive and excellent. When I sang Kentucky songs as a boy 12,000 miles away in sunny South Africa, Kentucky and America meant the same thing to me. Now that I am better informed of both I still think so. Being from (South) Africa, your darkies put me down as "none of our folks," but, Mr. Editor, it is a "sight" that did not hurt.

We have so much in common with this glorious country and especially Kentucky. Great analogies in our histories brought forth causes with the same effects. Our ancestors left the same ports almost 300 years ago, imbued with the same ideals of democratic freedom and constitutional government to shape the destinies of the world's greatest nations—then unborn. The early pioneer life, jealousies and quarrels, even wars of European nations have moulded the South African and American on pretty much the same pattern.

We are learning great lessons from you, and we profit by your mistakes and building on the best principles we know we can with our wonderful resources, achieve great things. We have a future as great as yours. Our sun is rising. Yonder in the south of the twilight the continent of Africa is dawning a future that will bring forth another U. S. A. that will make the Dark Continent the land of the Sun, the giver of life. For this end we need the sympathy and help of this glorious country and the civilized world. May our national friendship become closer as mine has individually through contact with the people.

Thanking you very much for the space given me, I am, Mr. Editor,

Yours very sincerely,

J. van der Heyde Schreuder.

Dr. Schreuder is one of several students sent by the Government of the Union of South Africa to foreign countries to study agriculture in all its phases.

He has for the last three years given his best attention to live stock wherever they were worth studying.

Dr. Schreuder, having seen and studied the best of the world, is naturally very modest in expressing his views on our stock, but whatever he says is in superlative terms. We are pleased that he likes Kentucky and that we could show him hospitality. Dr. Schreuder is a brilliant student, high-toned gentleman and a credit to his nation and government. We wish him every success in life.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stilliter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who shall believe that she is a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cavern, in care of a woman, to be molded to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse. Tommy is adopted by Barclay, but loses his heirship and on a hunting trip discovers Celestia. Stilliter takes Celestia to New York. Tommy follows, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins.

CHAPTER XVII.

"Don't be afraid," said Celestia calmly. "I won't hurt you."

And that was almost the last thing that Freddie's vaguely working mind expected her to say. "She," he thought, "ought to be afraid of me. I am a man; she is a girl. I have a club; she hasn't. I am to take her to Sweetzer, dead or alive. I can crack her head like an egg. So why does she tell me not to be afraid? Why does she say she won't hurt me? Maybe she's got a gun. Maybe she knows something."

All the while her magnificent, compassionate eyes held him spellbound. He heard something fall heavily to the floor. He looked to see what it was. It was his club. He tried to pick it up, but seemed to lack the necessary muscular control.

"What's your name?" asked Celestia.

"Freddie Douglas."

"Do you belong in this house?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then we must be friends, because I belong here, too."

"You going to live with us?"

Celestia nodded.

"Honor bright," smiled Celestia.

"Honor bright?" asked Freddie suspiciously.

It was then no longer necessary for Freddie to take sudden action. If Celestia was going to live on in the same house it would be a simple matter at some more propitious moment (when she wasn't looking at a fellow, for instance) to turn her over to Sweetzer.

Nevertheless, it seemed to Freddie that the matter required thought, and he slunk off to think. It required time and luck. He had less good luck at thinking than at anything else.

His proposition was this: Sweetzer had paid a thousand dollars for Celestia and had lost her. He had said to Freddie in effect, "Get her back. There's money in it." How much money was there in it? Suppose there was so much, how could Freddie turn it into more? Probably Mrs. Baxter would also pay money to know what had become of Celestia. Freddie knew that his father needed more money to pay the rent, and the bright spots in his brain began to work.

First he went to Sweetzer.

"Well," said Sweetzer.

"I shouldn't wonder," said Freddie.

"If I was going to find her. I got a clue."

"Good."

"How much money is there in it?"

"A dollar."

Freddie simply smiled a sad little smile, turned on his heel and started to walk away.

"Hold on, Freddie; I was kiddin' you."

"You mustn't kid me. It drives me crazy. I shouldn't wonder if I could find her for"—his lips trembled at their own audacity—"fifty."

Sweetzer's face did not even show surprise.

"You take me where she is," he said, "and I'll go you the fifty."

A dull spot on Freddie's brain tried to make him say "All right, come along," but a bright spot suddenly intervened and made him say instead:

"All right, I find her sure."

Next Freddie went to Mrs. Baxter's home. A taxicab was drawn up at the curb and the front door was ajar. Freddie simply walked into the house. There were voices in the front parlor. Freddie simply stepped to the portieres, which served the front parlor as a door, and stood, listening.

"So help me God, I have told the truth!" Mrs. Baxter was saying, and Freddie judged she was crying.

"So help me Gawd—Mister—Mister—what did you say your name was?"

"Barclay."

"Mr. Barclay, I wouldn't worry if I was you. She came to no harm with me, and I'm as bad as they make 'em."

"Look here," said Tommy. "What would you do in my place?"

"I'd offer big money for news of her. Money acts quicker than lightning."

"Why," said Tommy, "I'd give a thousand dollars just to know that she was safe."

Freddie, the ferret, stepped into the room from between the portieres.

"She's safe!" he said, with fine dramatic instinct.

"Safe!" cried Tommy. "Where is she? You've seen her? Who is this young man?"

"He's called Freddie the Ferret," said Mrs. Baxter, "because he often finds things that other people can't."

But (she lowered her voice a little "he ain't to be always relied on; he's sort of half-witted.")

But Freddie's bright spots were all on the qui vive for once.

"She was safe when I last seen her," he said, "but I don't know where she is, and I'd have to hunt for her. Didn't you say you'd give something just to know she was safe?"

"I did," said Tommy, "but I don't know she's safe. You find her and take me to her and you shall have a thousand, and more, too."

"You'll get twenty-five from me," exclaimed Mrs. Baxter, "poor as I am."

A bright spot in Freddie's brain made the following calculation: "50 plus $1,000 plus $25 equals $1,075, and more, too." A dull spot was for saying:

"Come along, I know where she is."

But, as before, a bright spot intervened.

"Where can I find you quick?" said Freddie.

Tommy gave him his card.

"All right," said Freddie, "you'll hear from me soon," and he swung importantly out of the room.

He had a new proposition now. How to take Sweetzer, Mrs. Baxter and Mr. Barclay all to Celestia at the same time, so that he could get all the money. This new proposition required very patient thinking, and he walked on and on without considering in the least where he was going.

After a long time he sank down on a bench in Central park and took a nap. Sometimes he dreamed of solutions to difficult problems. But he didn't this time. He was waked by a hand on his shoulder.

"Why, Freddie, what are you doing hereabouts?"

"Dunno," said Freddie. "What you doing, O'Gorman?"

"Me? I'm looking for a beautiful young lady in a white dress, with a band of jewels across her forehead."

Freddie laughed aloud.

"Another!" he exclaimed. "What do you get if you find her?"

"I get a good bit, Freddie, and anyone that finds her for me and tells me first gets half of it."

"I can find her," said Freddie.

"You've done queer things. Well, if you do, it's a go. You take me to her and we'll share and share alike."

Then Freddie went down to see if Celestia was still there. She was.

"Why, Celestia," he said, "I don't deny that you've some mysterious power over people, and that if you keep on as you are going you'll end up by making a great, loud noise in the world. But suppose you do get what you want? Suppose that even in time you do elect a congress, a senate and a president; suppose you do succeed in changing the whole country into a gigantic trust, what of it? Can't you see that you will be hurting the people instead of helping them? Can't you see that the men who run your great trust, my respected father among them, will become the greatest autocrats the world has ever known? Can't you see that you would simply be playing into the hands of capital?"

Celestia simply smiled on him and shook her head.

"I can convince anybody but you," she said. "I can't convince you, and I don't know why."

"That's too easy," said Tommy.

"You don't convince anybody by logic or argument. They just naturally believe you. You've got some way of making them believe you. I think you're a sort of witch. I think you are way up in magic. You can't hypnotize the man that truly loves you any more than you could hypnotize the man you truly love. That's a well known law."

Tommy was half in earnest, half joking.

"I don't know what you are talking about," said Celestia, "and it doesn't matter. And now—"

"Please don't send me away," said Tommy. "It's the first time we've been alone in ages, and I've got millions of things to tell you and millions of other things to—well, to look at you."

"Tommy," said Celestia, "you talk more nonsense than anyone in the world. I don't believe you've any brains at all. But if you're really got a million things to say to me, you'll have to say them walking. I'm going to the shop where Nelly works to talk with the girls."

"Can't I wait till you come out and fetch you home?"

CHAPTER XVIII.

Nelly worked on the fifth floor of an old-fashioned firetrap belonging to the Octagon Shirt Manufacturing company. The business was not making a great deal of money and the building was heavily insured. Celestia parted from Tommy in the street.

"Won't there be a row," he asked, "if you interrupt work to make a speech, or can you make yourself heard above the sewing machines and the smell of patchouli? Or do you go from girl to girl and whisper in each one's ear?"

"I have to pay for a chance to speak to them," said Celestia, "ten dollars a minute for ten minutes."

Freddie opened the front door and said:

"Walk in."

They walked in. Then he showed them into the parlor, and there was Celestia.

But she wouldn't go away with Tommy, and O'Gorman had no authority to take her away.

"That's up to the professor," he said.

But when Stilliter found that she was with good people and wouldn't go with Tommy he was contented to let matters rest where they were.

Celestia's real work had begun. Often upon the lips of the elder Douglas, and always in his heart, was the belief that Celestia was divinely inspired and of divine origin.

Mrs. Douglas and Nelly also believed that Celestia had come from heaven. Her effect upon these simple-minded folk was extraordinary.

She looked no longer like a Greek goddess, but like a simple working girl. And yet she remained magically lovely to look at and commanding.

Stilliter, after ten minutes' talk with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas (during a short absence of Celestia), concluded that she could not be in better hands. Indeed, it had been in a similar family that he had intended to place her.

"She says," said Douglas, "that every man jack of us ought to have a real share in the country. That we must treat misery and poverty not as necessary evils, but as epidemics, and stamp 'em out. And I tell you the man who runs that platform will get a heap o' votes in this district. Nobody ever tries to argue with her. You just listen and believe."

Stilliter reported to Barclay and the other members of the triumvirate. And those who had begun to lose faith in Celestia once more became enthusiastic.

"Don't hurry her any," said Barclay. "Let her doctrines spread from the house she's living in, slowly and naturally, until she has a real following. Then when we do begin to advertise her it will be more effective and cheaper."

"I'm only afraid of one thing," said Stilliter. "She is interested in that boy of yours, Tommy, and when she is with him she seems to shake her mind almost free from the control that I had been establishing over it all these years. I thought that I had made her quite proof against falling in love and all physical temptation. But it seems not."

"Any young man," said Barclay, grimly, "who seems to be making trouble for us will have to be sent away somewhere and kept there."

But Celestia, having begun to make converts, was engrossed in the work and had no longer the leisure, or, indeed, the wish to waste her precious time in philandering with individuals.

When Tommy had finally traced her to the Douglases he went often to see her, for it was hard for him to be away from her at all. But, as we Americans say, "she did not give him a good run for his money." She appeared calmly fond of him. But she was no longer a complete stranger to the world and its ways. She hardly ever "happened" to be alone when he came to see her, and she seemed always on the point of doing something or other in which he could not take part. He loved her more and more, but he did not flinch from telling her that he thought her schemes for the benefit of mankind were impracticable and foolish.

"Why, Celestia," he said, "I don't deny that you've some mysterious power over people, and that if you keep on as you are going you'll end up by making a great, loud noise in the world. But suppose you do get what you want? Suppose that even in time you do elect a congress, a senate and a president; suppose you do succeed in changing the whole country into a gigantic trust, what of it? Can't you see that you will be hurting the people instead of helping them? Can't you see that the men who run your great trust, my respected father among them, will become the greatest autocrats the world has ever known? Can't you see that you would simply be playing into the hands of capital?"

Celestia simply smiled on him and shook her head.

"I can convince anybody but you," she said. "I can't convince you, and I don't know why."

"That's too easy," said Tommy.

"You don't convince anybody by logic or argument. They just naturally believe you. You've got some way of making them believe you. I think you're a sort of witch. I think you are way up in magic. CHAPTER XVIII.

Nelly worked on the fifth floor of an old-fashioned firetrap belonging to the Octagon Shirt Manufacturing company. The business was not making a great deal of money and the building was heavily insured. Celestia parted from Tommy in the street.

"Won't there be a row," he asked, "if you interrupt work to make a speech, or can you make yourself heard above the sewing machines and the smell of patchouli? Or do you go from girl to girl and whisper in each one's ear?"

Freddie opened the front door and said:

"Walk in."

They walked in. Then he showed them into the parlor, and there was Celestia.

But she wouldn't go away with Tommy, and O'Gorman had no authority to take her away.

"That's up to the professor," he said.

But when Stilliter found that she

"I'm Afraid of Only One Thing," Said Stilliter. "She is Interested in That Boy of Yours."

Tommy paced the narrow sidewalk like a sentinel on duty.

A couple of young men entered the building. They passed under a sign which said: "Positively No Smoking." And Tommy was annoyed to observe that both were smoking cigarettes. One threw aside his cigarette, still lit, the other kept on smoking, and they passed out of sight up the stairs.

"I'll report those two cubs to the manager," he said. "And if he doesn't seem properly interested I'll make things hot for him."

So Tommy entered the premises of the Octagon Shirt company and began to look for the manager. Some people said he was in such and such a place, and others didn't know. But a girl who seemed to be dying of consumption said that Mr. Grady had just stepped up to the fifth floor, where the sewing machines were, with a young lady.

At once Tommy pictured that Grady as greasy and bediamonded and hated him. Also, so strong was his imagination, he imagined that he smelt smoke.

At the opposite end of a long dark room Celestia's lovely earnest face seemed to shine like a light. She was speaking very softly and gently, but every word was distinctly audible even to the farthest pair of ears. It seemed to Tommy that the room contained hundreds of girls and hundreds of sewing machines. As a matter of fact there were almost a hundred of each. Near Celestia stood a dark, stoutish man with a pencil over one ear.

"Grady," thought Tommy, and hated him less, for although the man was greasy and did wear something that looked like a diamond in his necktie, there was a kind of reverent expression upon his coarse hard face.

Celestia was just finishing when Tommy entered. She finished, and there was no sound whatever in the room. Then one girl left her place and went slowly toward her; others followed until as many as could be were crowded closely about Celestia and Grady.

As for the man Grady, she had looked into his eyes just once, and he, too, believed. But dark thoughts tormented him. There were upon his conscience, for one had just been born in him, many sins of hard-heartedness, brutality and work. In that building there was not one girl whose life he might not have lightened, a little if it had pleased him. It had pleased him to do the reverse. Suddenly he felt moved to take the whole world into his confidence, and to promise amends to those whom he had injured.

"Girls," he said, in a loud, strong voice, "Just one or two words, please. I don't know what the talk we've been listening to has done to you. But it got me. I charged this—I don't know whether to say Lady or whether to say Angel—a big price for the privilege of speaking to you for ten minutes. I want to say, first of all, that it won't cost her a cent. And if she needs money to carry on her good work in this world she can have my pile. But that's not all I've got to say. Be a little patient. Don't crowd her so. If I'm any judge of faces she won't go without letting the last least one of you touch her hand. Girls, I've been a slave-driver so long that I got hardened to the work. If there was ever any kindness in me it seemed to me I had to stamp it out to get results. I've driven you and driven you till you can't call your souls your own. I might have been different and got the work done just the same. But I wasn't. Well, I'm going to be. She said things would get better some time. They're better right this minute. Can't you feel the difference? Can't you feel that I'm sorry for the things I've said to you and done to you? I tell you I'm ashamed. I don't know what keeps me from sinking down through the floor. The hardest things I've got to say comes next. Some of you girls know me for a hard, cold-hearted man. Is there any girl here who can say worse than that of me?"

He paused as if waiting for a reply. Then he went on.

"Well there is one girl here who could say worse than that of me if she would. But she won't. She won't squeal. So I'll have to do the squealing. Molly Bryan! Step forward, please, Molly Bryan! I've something to say to you that I want all your friends and well-wishers to hear."

Very slowly a slender girl with tragic haunted dark eyes came forward.

"Stand alongside of me Molly, and turn so's everybody can see you. Some of you," he went on, "have known Molly a long time. Was there ever a better-hearted friend, or a cheerfuller worker? Look at poor Molly now! She looks as sad as the East river on a winter day. It's no news to any of you or I wouldn't go into it. But Molly's got no big brother, nor no heavy fisted father to look after her. All she had was herself to look after herself and a heart that trusted everybody. And you know as well as I do, as well as she does, what's come over her eyes, that used to be so bright and smiling, to make them look the way they do. Look here—"

He took a much crumpled paper from his breast pocket.

"Girls," he said, "this here is a license for me and Molly to get married. It's four months old now, but it's a perfectly good license; in perfectly good working order. I fooled her with it. That's what I did—"

He turned abruptly to the girl at his side.

"I don't ask you to forgive me now, Molly, not this moment I don't, not till I've made good with you by kind words and thoughtful deeds. But I do ask you to step out with me right now to the office of the nearest magistrate, and—and I'll always be good to you."

Celestia stepped swiftly forward, took the girl's thin pretty face between her two hands and kissed her.

"I know you'll be happy," she said. After Celestia, many others, some crying with excitement, came forward to kiss Molly and wish her well. And then the manager made Molly take his arm, and he led her the length of the room, looking proud and manly, and out of the door.

From the outskirts of the crowd a very young, sick-looking girl said suddenly in a loud piercing voice:

"I smell smoke. I smell smoke!"

There was a dead silence. And then another voice spoke.

"It's coming through the floor. Look at it! Look at it!"

Tommy, a sudden great dread in his heart, hurried toward Celestia. He had traversed half the length of the room when the girl who had spoken first screamed at the top of her lungs:

"Fire! Fire!"

Others took up the cry, and upon the instant pandemonium broke loose.

There was no longer any doubt that the building was really on fire. Just how the smoke got into the sewing-machine room you could not see, but there was plenty of it, enough to make Tommy cough and to fill his eyes with tears. Celestia, after a desperate effort to calm the girls, had not moved. It seemed almost as if she was waiting for Tommy to come and get her.

"Come, Celestia," he said, "let's get out of this."

As he spoke a billow of smoke shot up between two planks, and for the first time the crackling of burning wood could be heard.

By this time really horrible things were happening at the pine-bound door. It opened inward. The first girl to reach it had flung herself against it, of course, and tried to make it open outward.

Tommy tried to fight his way to it. He intended to get to it and fight the girls back from it so that it could be opened.

He forced his way to the middle of the crowd, and then he had to give up. It was all he could do to fight his way out again.

The other end of the room was in flames. Through the soles of his shoes Tommy knew that the whole floor was burning on its under side.

A glance at Celestia filled his heart with pity that was almost intolerable. She, too, it seemed, had gone mad with terror. Along the walls of the room were many fire-buckets half full of water. Celestia had caught up one of them and was running toward the struggling mass of humanity under the door. But Celestia had not gone mad. She was excited, but her mind was still capable of putting two and two together.

She hurled the contents of the bucket into the thick of the crowd, and raced off for another. The effect of that sudden hard shower of cold water was extraordinary.

Tommy got to the door at last and dragged it open. That started another stampede that had to be controlled with more water and with more violence. But gradually Tommy at the door and Celestia in the crowd began to bring a little order out of the chaos, and to herd the girls through the doorway like sheep, not too many at a time.

It had been a slow business, and by now the floor was burning clear through in many places, so that some of the last girls to pass through the door to safety went with burned feet. "Hurry, Celestia," called Tommy. "We can go now."

She did not answer. He saw her at a window struggling to open it.

"This way, Celestia! For God's sake, don't jump!"

And he ran to her across the smoking and burning floor. As he reached her a portion of the floor over which he had just passed fell in with a cracking, crashing sound, and through the aperture flame and smoke roared upward as from the crater of a volcano.

Celestia had not succeeded yet in opening the window. As Tommy reached her she staggered and fell into his arms.

He turned with her toward the door, and groaned like a thing that had been hurt to death. Escape that way looked impossible.

Supporting Celestia with one arm he succeeded in opening the window. The crowd in the street below saw them, and a kind of groaning and lamentation arose.

Celestia began to revive.

Tommy had turned his back to the window. Not until the last moment would he let her jump, and then only to escape a more shocking death. Meanwhile his heart beat strongly, and he pressed her closer to his breast as if he thought as they had at best but a few minutes to live he must make her understand how much he loved her.

"Oh," he thought, "if only she could love me, could let me know she loved me before the end."

It seemed to him that he couldn't die, that he mustn't die without her knowing that.

Then a sudden and more practical thought came into his head. If he was to die, he must die trying to save her. Then she would understand. He looked about him wildly, and his eyes fell upon a great roll of black and white-striped material for making shirts. Leaving Celestia leaning against the wall near the open window, he made a dash for the shirting, and unrolled it, dashing over it the contents of a number of the fire buckets that still contained water.

It was his notion to wrap Celestia in the wet stuff, to take her in his arms, and carry her safe to the door, and to that safety which still seemed to exist beyond.

By some strange freak of the fire there was still quite a large area of flooring surrounding Celestia, yet unburned. But between that and the door, to make the crossing, seemed to offer but one chance in a hundred. The one who was carried might live to tell the tale. The one who did the carrying could hardly hope for so much. He would be so badly burned that, although he might be alive when he reached the street, he would not live long thereafter.

It takes many words often to tell of what happens in a few instants of time. From the first cry of fire to the time when Tommy had wrapped Celestia in the wet shirting, and was preparing, you may say, to wade through hell for her, was only a few minutes.

The last girls to leave the sewing machine room had only just reached the street.

"Now for it," thought Tommy, and to Celestia he shouted (he had to shout to make himself heard):

"Don't be afraid, dear. I'm going to get you out of this."

And he gathered her strongly in his arms, pictured out with swift eyes, what appeared to be the best route through the flames, drew one great, long breath of fresh air, and just then another great piece of flooring fell in, and Tommy saw the narrow hallway beyond the door burst suddenly into a perfect hell of fire.

He was too late by a matter of instants.

If he had not wasted those precious instants in kissing her he might have saved her. The agony of soul that he went through with this realization was frightful. Death by fire seemed almost too good for such a fool.

Then suddenly it seemed as if his mind broke and that he had gone mad, for he began to shout and laugh all at once.

Had he gone mad? Or hadn't he?

THE SAME EVERYWHERE

Mr. E. E. Kelley, one of the editors in the imperial council of Kansas journalism and editor of the Toronto Republican, recently printed the following for the people of his community:

"Every week the paper—this paper or any other—has typographical errors; and there is always someone ready to laugh mirthlessly over it and hold the paper up to scorn and say a blacksmith could do a better job with both hands tied, and proceed to bawl out the editor publicly. And the editor, being meek in spirit and lowly, grins a sun-grin as if he liked it, because he knows the utter futility of explaining. Then he goes back to the shop and bites a nail in two or eats a wooly worm to relieve his feelings; and finally wonders how his tormentors would feel, should he turn critic and point out the typographical errors, so to speak, in the make-up of the hilarious ones. Furrinistance: Hon. Jehu Junkins shaves himself, and last Sunday appeared at church with a patch of unshaven whiskers under the angle of his jaw the size of a grown man's thumb; Sis Stiggins had her hat on crooked and the shoestring on her switch showed through what little real hair she has left. The undershirt of the belle of the village hung on one side a full inch below the bottom of her dress; Amri Toots one of our best known city gents, walked down the aisle with a long raveling hanging to his coat tail; old Ebenezer Stone had blacked the front compartment of his shoes until he could see his reflection in them, while his shoe heels had not had a treatment since he bought them last summer a year ago, and they bore traces and the odor of a barnyard; Billy B. Damm, who ordinarily doesn't give three whoops for anything and doesn't care who knows it, blushed a rosy red when, walking with his best girl, he produced a washrag from his pocket instead of his handkerchief; Miss Peachie Peachero, who is risin' thirty-five and near-sighted, waited a kiss to a traveling man getting on the train under the impression that it was her brother who departed from our midst on the same common carrier. As the poet remarks, we are all poor critters and prone to errors of make-up even as the sparks fly upward; and all good and true editors, instead of impaling the kit and bundle on his harpoon to get good and even once for all, will again next week smile his feeble sun-grin when he is publicly roasted and let it go at that. An editor hasn't much sense anyway. That's why he is an editor.

Give the young and struggling a word of encouragement now and then. You would not leave those plants in your window boxes without water nor refuse to open the shutters that the sunlight may fall upon them, but you would leave some human flower to suffer from want of appreciation or the sunlight of encouragement.

GERMANY REGRETS LOSS OF AMERICAN LIFE

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, has communicated to the State Department instructions from his government expressing regret and sympathy "if Americans lost their lives in the sinking of the liner Arabie," and asking the United States to delay taking a definite stand in regard to the affair until Germany could be heard from.

This was the first word from an official German source concerning the Arabie, on which two Americans perished. Its receipt was followed by an evident relaxation of the tension which had been growing here as days passed with no indication of a desire on Germany's part to disclaim any intention of committing an act "deliberately unfriendly" toward the United States.

No attempt was made, either at the State Department or the White House, to interpret the ambassador's communication. Officials merely said that, of course the American Government would await the German explanation of the action of the submarine commander in sinking the liner.

Count Bernstorff telegraphed the State Department from New York the text of his instructions from Berlin. It follows:

"So far no official information available concerning the sinking of the Arabie. The German government trusts that the American government will not take a definite stand at hearing only the report of one side, which, in the opinion of the Imperial government, cannot correspond with the facts, but that a chance will be given to Germany to be heard equally.

"Although the Imperial government does not doubt the good faith of the witnesses whose statements are reported by the newspapers in Europe, it should be borne in mind that these statements are naturally made under excitement, which might easily produce a wrong impression. If Americans should have actually lost their lives this would naturally be contrary to our instructions. The German government would deeply regret the fact and begs to tender sincerest sympathy of the American government."

Secretary Lansing indicated he did not intend to reply to the ambassador's message at this time. He agreed to its publication with the statement that he had no comment to make.

Particularly attention was attracted by the assertion in the German communication that, in the opinion of the Imperial government, the accounts of the sinking of the Arabie which have come from England could not correspond with the facts.

These accounts, in affidavits by the Captain of the ship and American survivors, have agreed that the Arabie, an unarmed steamer passenger vessel, bound for the United States, with no contraband in her cargo, was torpedoed without warning by a submarine.

It may be a week or more before Germany is heard from further. The report of the submarine commander is awaited in Berlin, and it is known that sometimes ten days or more elapse before the under-water boats return to their bases and communicate with the Admiralty.

In the evening of the same day the Sunday School Mass Meeting will be held at the Presbyterian church in Mt. Sterling. Rev. George A. Joplin will be present at both these meetings. BREAK OUT OF THE COOP

"I don't get enough exercise, I feel like a hen shut up in a coop," remarked a local citizen to us a few days ago.

And without wonder.

He is closeted in his business house all day, and at night he is at home with his family.

Sunday he goes to church in the morning, and in the afternoon he usually entertains callers at his home.

He has no time for exercise and he has no recreation.

He is just about like the hen in the coop. He moves around in a restricted space and continually fans a desire for freedom that is never gratified.

His mind is overworked and his muscles are underworked. There is no happy medium, and he is paying the price.

Now here's your remedy, brother, and with no price attached.

You have ten or twenty good friends who are probably situated much as you are.

Send those friends a little note and ask them to meet with you some evening. Then propose to them that you all take a long walk the following Sunday afternoon, "just for exercise."

It will be something out of the ordinary grind and will appeal to them. They will go.

You should walk two abreast and keep in step, every foot coming down at the same instant. Let the leaders set the pace, and let each man see that his left foot touches the ground at the same time of the left foot of the man in front. That is to prevent one man coming down with his left foot at the same time another does with his right, which is contrary to all pedestrian rules.

Throw out your chest to a natural position, straighten your shoulders, raise your head, avoid all stiffness, and walk briskly with a free and easy swing.

It will brace you up, aid your crippled digestion, assist your sluggish circulation of blood, put a sparkle in your eye, and make a new man of you all around.

That steady tramp, tramp, will go right into your blood and set you on fire.

You will learn how to walk with dignity and grace, and in time will carry the same alert, upright and energetic movements into your daily life.

It will be better than medicine and cheaper than the doctor, a stimulant and a tonic for both mind and body.

Break out of the coop, brother, break out of the coop!

OUR PRESIDENT

It must be gratifying, beyond measure, to every liberty-loving American, to see our President proclaimed by the whole universe, as the "first citizen of the world." Thoroughly heedless of a muckraking and subsidized press, he has by his intelligence, courage, patience and patriotism, admirably handled every hazardous situation and will continue to prevent bloodshed and carnage so long as it can be done with honor to his native land, thus giving to other countries a genuine Christian example.

God, in His infinite wisdom, certainly blessed "The Land of the Free," when He placed in charge of the old ship of State the peace-loving and incorruptible Woodrow Wilson.

William 1:58½ at Lexington.

William 1:58½, the new champion pacing king, holder of the world's record for three- and four-year-old stallions and the five-year-old championship record, will attempt to add further laurels to his crown by an assault on the world's record of Dan Patch of 1:55½ during the coming meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, October 4-16. The present record holder gained his record over the Lexington track October 7, 1905, with the aid of the wind-shield, whereas William's mile will be in the open. The young champion was recently purchased by Mr. C. K. G. Billings, who turned the horse over to Chas. Tanner, who is to get him ready for this supreme effort. Tanner is the man who trained and drove Uhlan to his world's trotting record of 1:58 over the same track in 1912 for Mr. Billings. William will not appear in public again this season until the Lexington meeting, during which he will make the attempt to beat Dan Patch's record of ten years' standing. In his racing career William never lost a heat except to Directum 1:58 and has beaten this great horse four times out of the six times they have met.

RELIGIOUS

Regular Sabbath services will be resumed at the Presbyterian church. There will be preaching at the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening by the pastor.

The W. C. T. U. will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John English, on Harrison avenue, at 2 o'clock. All members please come as this is the time for election of officers.

A great meeting has just closed at Howards Mill. About one year and a half ago the work of the Howards Mill church was renewed by the now acting pastor (Rev. J. S. Wilson), and only seven or eight members could be found. Now we have an active working membership of 40. Rev. Frank Hardin has been doing the preaching during the recent meetings to the delight and edification of the hearts of the people. The people of the community have rallied to the support of the old church and we now predict a great future for it. The untiring labors and undaunted courage with the loyal support of a faithful few, led by God's Spirit won the victory. Sunday afternoon three deacons were ordained by a very impressive service. Rev. Hardin preached the sermon, after which Rev. J. S. Wilson offered the ordaining prayer and delivered the charge to the deacons, followed by a charge to the church given by J. W. Hedden, Sr.

QUIET AFFAIR

The Democratic County Convention held here Saturday was a very quiet affair, since it was generally understood that there would be no contest. Chairman Jno. A. CLIPPINGS FROM THE SNAGTOWN TORCHLIGHT

Some men are suspicious minded enough to believe that the United States was laid off large so that the railroads could collect more fare.

One reason why the flea is so sensitive to noise is that most any noise is bigger than the average flea.

H. C. Denton has purchased a dish pan from the tin peddler, and is trying to join the Coon Holler brass band.

J. F. Cross caused a flutter of excitement in our midst one day this week by galloping up in front of the postoffice and announcing that he had just met a green colored mule down the road. While Mr. Cross is regarded as a truthful church member, the crowd could scarcely believe their ears, and a delegation started out to view the mule with their own eyes. They looked up and down the road for several miles, and when they got back to the postoffice they found that Mr. Cross had looked at an ordinary sorrel mule through green spectacles.

Ralph Lynch notices that the public makes an awful to-do about it when some bill passes the House at Washington. He says somebody passes his house nearly every day. But Farmer Williams says if anything has yet passed the still house he hasn't Senate.

The conversation at the postoffice the other night drifted from the Galveston flood down nearer to home, and the subject of buzzards was dwelt upon at length by Dr. Joe Pace and others. Farmer Al Williams recalled that he had seen probably the biggest and oldest one on record. He said this one roosted over in an old barn in the Goose Ankle neighborhood, and was a hundred and twenty years old. It measured more than fifty feet from tip to tip, and many a time he says he has seen it swoop down and take a cow right out of the pasture in its claws, and feed it to the young ones.

Marion Riggs has a grievance against the high-handed manner in which the government does business. He says when it began to lay out the parcel post system, it cut the country up into small units, and never asked anybody for a right-of-way through their farms.

In giving his opinion of the suffragette business, Colonel Bob McRoberts, the other morning stated that there was enough argument already going on around the house without adding politics.

There is no news herabouts, except that the fire took and burnt up one-half the town; but our readers know that already.

EVERYBODY IN LINE

From what we can gather every Democrat in Lincoln county will support the splendid ticket nominated some ten days ago. Supporters of Mr. McChesney are disappointed and there is reason why they should be, but they are rallying to the standard like men and will be found in line when the November election comes. Looks like Stanley's plurality in August will be a small thing as compared with his majority in November. And so mote it be.—The Standard Interior Journal.

DESERVE TO WIN

The full ticket of Democratic nominees of the late State Primary goes at the masthead of the Progress this morning to remain until November 2nd., the date when all of them are to be elected. The ticket, from top to bottom, is composed of gallant Democrats, who deserve to win in November. Let's help 'em, one and all.—Trenton Progress.

PAWNS IN THE GAME

A New York financier estimates the cost of the war is now around $50,000,000 per day and the amount spent thus far is estimated to have been about $15,500,000,000. The same authority says the wealth of the United States has been computed to be something near $189,000,000,000. The first year of the war cost about one-twelfth of this amount. At this rate of destruction a sum equal to the total wealth of the United States would be wiped out in twelve years. This money cost of a year's war does not include the destruction of cities, the devastation of countries, the wholesale looting of personal property or the unestimable loss of commerce. These nations at war have doubled their national debts, and the labor of unborn generations has been mortgaged to the financiers of the world. Wealth producers must pay the price. Those who dig and delve and plow and sow are the pawns in this game of war. Almost from the dawn of time, these have been the packbearers, the doormats, the savelings and the despised of monarchs and their favorites. They sow; they never reap. Those who do the least receive the most. If this war of wars should bring about disarmament of the nations of the world, it would assure a peace of a thousand years. But will it? Human nature never changes. Human greed is as strong today as it was thousands of years before the coming of the Nazarene with His gospel of peace and love. Men of all civilized nations prate of the Golden Rule, but it is a lip service for the most part. The dollar of commerce is the golden rule and how to get it is the chief aim of man. This is a blunt way of putting it, but it is the truth. Socialists are dreamers, men say, but they are for the disarmament of all nations and of peace among men. The Nazarene preached the same gospel and He was crucified. Two thousand years after His passing nations of men who call Him their Savior are as bloodthirsty in their treatment of their foeman as the savage Sioux of the West in the dark days of American pioneer life on the borderlands.—Exchange.

ALL FOR THE TICKET

We haven't heard of a single Democrat in Trigg county who is not for the entire ticket in November, and we don't believe there will be a one, for there certainly isn't any reason for them not being for it.—Candiz Record.

While human nature remains what it is, a word of appreciation will never be lost on old or young and is one of the best paying investments which can be made. Some say, "I don't care whether they like it or not," but that is all nonsense for man, woman or child; we every one of us feel our heart grow warm under merited praise, and if we get a little more of it than we deserve, which rarely happens in this world, we try to deserve more next time.

SHOPPER'S BEST FRIEND

IS LOCAL NEWSPAPER

The best friend of the careful buyer is the advertisement in the local paper.

It is the arrow that points the way.

It is a foregone conclusion that when a merchant goes to the expense of advertising certain goods that those goods are well worth the price and will stand up under the most rigid inspection. If it were otherwise the merchant would hardly be calling attention to them. He would simply resort to the shady trick of "working them off" on some unsuspecting dupe.

Very few buyers have the time to look all over town before making their purchases. Life is too short for that.

They must have the goods, and without unnecessary loss of time in making their selections, and it is but natural that they should turn to the advertising pages of the local paper for such advance information as may be obtained before starting out on their quest.

Thus it is that the merchant who advertises his wares, and keeps his best offering in the public eye has advantage of the man who never advertises and draws business to his store which otherwise might drift into other places.

It is good for the merchant and it is good for the buyer, for it enables the merchant to dispose of his goods at a reasonable profit and enables the buyer to make the purchases he desires to best advantage without loss of time.

And if there is a special bargain offered it enables the buyer to take advantage of the opportunity instead of going to some other place where a higher price would prevail.

Advertising has been reduced to a science, and those who benefit from it are not found only in the camp of the advertiser. The buyer shares equally in the benefits through the saving of time and the securing of the articles he desires at minimum prices.

Keep your eye on the advertising pages of this paper, for they will contain many attractive offerings from week to week.

Success comes to those who seek it and economical buying is one of the surest means to that end.

OBSERVATIONS OF O. UKID

Many a girl who ought to be married and (occasionally) happy, is still single and soured just because she took the advice of an old fool bachelor editing the Heart Problem Department.

Don't be fussy. It's a foolish waiter who resigns his job because the chef makes the soup so hot it burns the waiter's thumbs.

The old-fashioned girl who used to blush when some one spoke of a legacy, now has a daughter who has to attend the Negligee Revues to see if they're too naughty for mother.

Every dog has his day—but the younger the puppy, the more he's willing to trade it for half a big night.

Some women will have a perfectly good afternoon weeping over the imaginary sorrows of the heroine of a three act thriller, and then go home and pout because husband kicks on the seventh day hash for dinner.

A politician of experience doesn't fear to be named co-respondent in a divorce case. He has already heard every possible knock on his character.

The man who always "lets well enough alone," usually hasn't enough "well-enough" to worry about, anyway.

Every girl feels sorry for mother's old-fashioned ideas, and knows perfectly well that she'll never appear so to her children, later on.

No man is a hero to his chauffeur—or can ever hope to measure up to the perfections the other wife's husband possesses.

A DANGER

A danger that confronts the United States is that the force of public opinion aroused by a jingo press of no judgment may carry the Administration from its safe base and precipitate war with Germany. With a man of the iron nerve and courage of Woodrow Wilson in command the danger is remote, it is true, but it is a danger just the same. This country is not prepared for war. It will require several years to bring the country on a basis in any degree equal to that of European countries now fighting. It is perhaps true that Germany has a system of spies covering the United States who are better acquainted with the country's war footing than are the citizens of the country themselves. Perhaps it is true also that there are over two million German reservists in this country who could be relied on to take up the cause of the Fatherland in the event of a rupture. Germany is likewise buying and storing ammunition and other war supplies here, perhaps to use against us. All this may be true and it counts. It may be well for citizens to tie themselves to camps like that at Plattsburg, N. Y., and enter upon military training. It will at least be good for the tired business man's health. BUT—all of this is well-known to the authorities at Washington, better known than it is to the excited newspaper writers. Even more is known to President Wilson and his advisers. As a matter of fact, they have the WHOLE SITUATION before them and know exactly what they are doing and what the country ought to do. The vast majority of our people have confidence in the Administration, and believe it should be left unhampered to work out its delicate problems. If left alone there can be no doubt of a correct solution of every difficulty. So far as we are concerned, therefore, nobody can scare us or work up a war frenzy in this neighborhood until Woodrow Wilson gives notice that there are breakers ahead. Until then, war editors and correspondents and Theodore Roosevelt and Lexington Herald's may howl their heads off, but sweet slumber these delightful August evenings shall go undisturbed.—Cynthiana Democrat.

RUTH LAW LAWLESS SKIMMER OF THE SKY

With George Mayland, the "Miraculous Human Fly"

RUTH LAW.

RUTH LAW is "such a little queen," but she makes her big brothers of the wide blue sky sit up in their mono and bi-planes and take notice when she sails into the far reaches of the empyrean and does stunts that even a bird would not dream of doing. And yet she has been flying only two years, is one of only two women fliers in the country and is still in her teens. She is just an ambitious, daring, feminine little slip who has become enamored of aerial work, does not know the meaning of fear and who, while modestly deprecating what is known as "insane" or sensational flying and who preaches the beauty and commendability of scientific flying, yet skims and darts and spirals and dives and drives through the air in such dizzy fashion that her every appearance is the supreme sensation of the day.

Daredevilry evidently runs in the Law family, for Ruth is a sister to the famous Rodman Law, champion air man, high diver and motion picture sensation, whose doings have furnished the press with special stories galore. Not satisfied with the achievements she accomplishes alone, Ruth has secured another intrepid soul in George Mayland, a parachute jumper, who goes up for 2,000 feet or over in the "Air Queen's" machine, creeps out on the crossed wires under the plane, cuts loose his chute from the body of the car and, with the airship going sixty or seventy miles an hour, drops 500 feet before he dares let his frail support umbrella open and carry him to the earth 1,500 feet.

Rushing at a rate too terrific for even an express train to rival, the effect of this sudden lightening of the madly careening airship, outlined like a shooting star against the far sky, is absolutely awesome, and spectators momentarily lose breath and speech until the little flier and the big car right themselves and triumphantly continue their journey—for that time at least.

Going over Niagara falls in a barrel or smoking in a gunpowder factory is inconsequent compared with this feat, which sends shivers up the spine at the mere description and which is in reality one of the most spectacular, sensational, electrifying and tremendously thrilling ever witnessed and which no other flier is duplicating or attempting.

Every day Ruth Law and her nerve tingling turn will be the supreme attraction at the Kentucky State Fair, and on two afternoons of the week George Mayland will make his death-defying dive.

BANNER TOBACCO YEAR

Early Crops Insure Great Show For Thirteenth Annual Kentucky State Fair

FOR the first time in the past several years conditions are entirely favorable for tobacco growers, and the crop for 1915 will be an unusually early one. In view of this fact it is more than probable that the tobacco exhibit at the Kentucky State Fair this year will be an interesting and extensive one, with growers of every county competing for the interesting premiums offered. E. S. Rees, superintendent of the department, is making an appeal to growers throughout the state to do their sections proud this season by entering the banner leafage of their crops, and the rivalry will be keen.

Entries for the tobacco department will close Sept. 8, and in the interim application blanks and further information may be had from Evan S. Rees, superintendent, Springfield, Ky., or J. L. Dent, secretary, Kentucky State Fair, Louisville, Ky.

Handsome Programs For State Fair. Handsome programs for all the daily and nightly events of the thirteenth annual Kentucky State Fair, to be held in Louisville Sept. 13-18, are being prepared by Pat Clark and Harry Leslie, two of the best advertising experts in Louisville.

The books list every special feature, and each of the daily track and horse show events, giving entries, riders and time and place of showing and cover the Midway amusements, the Hippodrome show, band concerts and the great free outdoor affairs, which include the world's wonder, Ruth Law, in her flying exhibition, during which George Mayland dives from the airship with only a parachute between him and instant death.

Advertising space in these programs is choice and may be spoken for by addressing the above named representatives or the Kentucky State Fair offices in Louisville.

State Fair Season Tickets. Season tickets in book form are being prepared by the Kentucky State Fair management and will go on sale from Aug. 15 to Sept. 11. The books are decidedly economical to Fair visitors, comprising as they do a half dozen day tickets which sell singly at 50 cents at the Fair gate, but the half dozen go for $2. The night tickets, which are good after 6 o'clock and may be used both at the admission gates and the Hippodrome show in the Pavilion, sell for $1 for six. Books will be forwarded to out of town purchasers upon the receipt of postoffice money orders for the number of books desired. Address all applications and inquiries to J. L. Dent, secretary of the Kentucky State Fair, Louisville, Ky.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES IN VACCINATING HOGS

When hogs or pigs are heavily infested with worms, vaccination may result in considerable loss. Hogs that are excessively fat are not as good risks for vaccination as animals in medium condition. Farmers must provide proper care of hogs before and after treatment to reduce the risk to a minimum. Many of the undesirable results following vaccination are due to the condition of the hogs, or to the surroundings under which they are kept. These factors are in a majority of instances under the control of the owner.

The following points in hog management should be carefully considered:

1. Ascertain beyond a doubt whether or not cholera is present in the herd.
2. Animals stand the excitement and shock of vaccination better if the intestinal tract is empty; if free from parasites; if in medium flesh; if kept cool during the operation and confined in a clean, disinfected stall, bedded with straw while awaiting the injection of serum.
3. The point of inoculation must be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. The animals must not be allowed access to dirty, filthy wallows before or after treatment. It is impossible to clean a dirty hog with a small amount of antiseptic so that serum can be injected with any degree of cleanliness. Abscesses are most often the results of the filthiness of the hogs and not to any fault of the operator who employs proper precautions with his syringe and serum.
4. There must be a clean, dust-free enclosure for the hogs at the time of inoculation.
5. Following vaccination hogs must be kept in clean quarters for at least two days. Dirty wallows should be avoided. A good plan is to keep hogs in a well bedded stable. The feed should be laxative in nature. Losses sometimes follow vaccination in the winter months because animals are placed in damp, filthy quarters.
6. Great care is employed in preparing pure, potent serum. There is little risk in injecting good serum into hogs that are properly prepared for the operation and properly cared for followign it.

In summing up the factors which contribute to irregularities, it has been observed that in a great many herds the owner is negligent in providing the care necessary before and after treatment, especially those essentials herein mentioned.

STATE-WIDER IN LINE

We are for Stanley, teeth and toe nail, now. We are no less for State-wide than before the primary, but we are going to wait until another opportunity to fight for it, and then we will be in the game stronger than ever. We fought for the County Unit for more than a dozen years and we can fight that long or longer for State-wide. There is a principle involved as eternal as the hills and as true as gospel and this question will be finally settled by the popular vote of the people in favor of closing the saloons in Kentucky. Let the question rest and elect the Democratic ticket for we are no worse beat than we suffered many times while we were trying to get County Unit. We should stand by the Democratic party because that party has given us all the temperance legislation we have and will give us all we ask when we carry on the campaign sufficiently long to educate the masses.—Smithland Enterprise.

Col. W. P. Walton is preparing to resume the Lexingtonian, which he suspended a short time ago, to make as he says, "a wild goose chase after the phantasmagoria of office," and expects to issue in a week or two. A sadder and he hopes a wiser man, he says he will be able to get out a much better paper than ever before and help to elect others to office that was denied him and for which he will run "never again." The paper is soon to be issued semi-weekly and as soon as possible appear as a low priced daily.

CORRESPONDENCE

Stoops.

(By B. M. Goodan)

Farmers are making slow progress housing tobacco.

Sherman Hamilton is at home from the Good Samaritan Hospital. He is improving nicely.

Tom Stanfield moved last week to near Moorefield.

The continuous bad weather is badly damaging ripe tobacco, as farmers cannot house it to any advantage.

Born, August 25th, to Albert Varris and wife, a daughter.

John J. Coyle and family, of near Owingsville, visited relatives near here last week.

Mrs. Lucy Smathers and Mrs. Lida Mark, who recently moved to Lexington, are badly missed from their places at Springfield church.

Several from this section went to Owingsville Saturday to attend the school rally.

A good size crowd heard Dr.

Guerrant preach at Springfield Sunday, though the weather continued very threatening.

Thos. H. Carr, wife and little daughter, Mabel, of Clark county, were visitors here Sunday.

Lieutrell Warner and wife went Saturday to visit relatives at Salt Lick.

A missionary, whose name we did not learn, recently returned from Africa, will preach at Springfield Sunday morning.

The Stoops and Gudgeon Hill ball teams played a "soaking game" here Sunday afternoon. The rain "fell gently" during the entire game. Gudgeon Hill proved to be the best mud players and nosed out Stoops by a 10 to 9 score. The way the base runners flew up and bumped the ground, ran, crawled, rolled over and scooted proved great amusement for the few spectators who were sheltered under some friendly trees.

The scholars of Miss Stella Copher's school will give a pie supper Saturday night, September 4.

Levee.

Crops look fairly well in this section. Tobacco housing is now in progress and there is plenty of work if the "onery" boys will work.

L. B. Hadden purchased 5 nice steers from J. R. Crow at 7 cents per pound also bought several more at same price.

J. L. Faulkner bought of Menefee county people several cattle at a private price, also sold to them a nice bull calf for $45.

V. R. Faulkner sold to B. W. Hall a nice suckling bull calf for $50. Mrs. Wm. Turley remains about the same at the time of this writing.

Harve Knox, our popular mail carrier is off on his vacation, while Mr. Guy See performs his duties.

Mr. Perry Baker returned from R. L. Tipton's Saturday night. We all welcome Perry home.

Mr. Roger Baker visited friends and relatives in Clark county last week.

A closely contested game of ball Sunday between Levee and the High Pockets, was called in the eighth inning on account of rain. The batteries for Levee were Barnard and McDonald; for High Pockets, Carpenter and Morton. The game was pitched mostly by Knox with his famous snake ball. The Levee had not much of a chance but they did the best they could with Mr. Maples as our honorable umpire. The score was 22 to 4 in favor of Levee.

PREWITT REUNION

The Prewitt reunion, an event in which the descendants of many of the most prominent families of this section of the State participate, was held last Thursday. More than one hundred and forty persons were in attendance and the event was one of the most enjoyable and noteworthy since the custom has been established. The members of these families were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Nat B. Young, Mr. and Mrs. Prewitt Young and Miss Mary Ann Young, at "Walnut Grove," a beautiful locality on the estate situated on the Maysville pike, near Mt. Sterling. The day was ideal for such an occasion and nothing happened to mar the pleasure of the gathering.

This annual event attracts the members of the families from all sections, and all through the day scores thronged the beautiful woods. The occasion was one long to be remembered.

Under the spreading branches of the walnut and sugar trees in the grove, a delicious luncheon was served which consisted of all the delicacies of the season. This beautiful repast was heartily enjoyed. While the older members of the jolly party mingled with each other recounting the pleasant recollections of the reunions of the past the young folks spent several happy hours in playing interesting games.

In addition to the large number of the members of the various families, there were several visitors, friends of the Prewitts, who had been extended invitations to attend the gathering. Those who were in attendance were as follows.
